Teachers' Instructional Manual

Director General’s Message

The present curriculum reform can be viewed as an entry to the solution of a series of problems prevalent in the school system. The present curriculum has been designed with the aim of overcoming the problems related to thinking and social and personal weaknesses that the young generation has faced today.

When we consider the education systems in the Asian Countries comparatively, Sri Lanka was far ahead some years back. But now most of the other Asian countries have developed their education systems making Sri Lanka far behind them. One reason for this retreat is the lack of new vision and taking decisions on the existing phenomena and repeating it over and over again.

With the aim of overcoming this catastrophe, officers of the National Institute of Education have made an attempt on reforming the school curriculum with clear vision. The aims of the new curriculum have been formulated to have pupils’ competencies developed in building up their future making use of the knowledge that they already possess and the accumulation of new knowledge gained through exploration. To achieve these aims, a dynamic change in the role of the teacher is needed. In place of the teacher centred system of education prevalent today, a pupil centred, competency based activity oriented system is expected to be developed through new reforms, and hence teachers should be prepared to face challenges.

I thoroughly believe that this Teachers' Instructional Manual will help teachers immensely to develop such a system. I assure that you will be able to work as a successful teacher by following the instructions and guidelines given in this Teachers' Instructional Manual. It will help you in teaching as well as in evaluating pupils. Guidelines given with relevance to exploration and quality inputs have been presented in the way of helping the student. Further, it will help the school principal in preparing time tables, allocating limited resources and in internal supervision.

Teachers without getting confined to the instructions given in the Teachers' Instructional Manual, should develop appropriate activities by themselves exhibiting their creativity, since the activities given here are only specimens and teachers have the capacity to formulate activities by themselves to suit the differences in the area that they serve.

I hope this Teachers' Instructional Manual will also help the educationists, teacher counselors and officers involving in external supervision and monitoring. Finally I should convey my thanks to all those who participated in compiling this Teachers' Instructional Manual.

Introduction

According to the curriculum policy of Sri Lanka, the school syllabus has to be updated once in every eight years. Accordingly the present syllabus and the Teachers' Instructional Manual have been introduced under the Education Reforms started in 2007.

In the syllabi prevalent so far, there was a series of subject topics relevant to a subject and subject matter relevant to each of those subjects' topics. It was expected from the teacher to teach those subject matter. As a result of this process a generation of students with broad subject knowledge was created.

In the syllabi introduced under new curriculum reforms, competencies identified as to be developed under each subjects have been recommended. Through this new approach, it is anticipated to produce a generation of pupils who have gone beyond the status of possessing a broad subject knowledge, instead, who are more inclined to the practical side and possessing competencies. Hence, the teachers who work with new syllabi should specifically understand this change.

In this Teachers' Instructional Manual in the section on learning activities a classroom with a new teaching learning process has been suggested. Under this process the classroom should reflect a learning culture with exploration done by using the library and reading books, observation of environment, collecting facts from resource persons, learning from peers and teaching the peers what one knows and collecting information through the internet wherever it is possible. The text book provided by the Department of Educational Publications also should be made use of as a resource book. It is expected from the teacher to present these facts explored by students making necessary corrections and organised and full fledged to be absorbed by them. Hence, the teacher should possess the new knowledge. It should exhibit to be learned exceeding facts that the students explore. The activity based learning environment will be attractive to students.

Exemplary lessons suggested in this Teachers' Instructional Manual will supply guidance to the teacher to develop many more lessons. It is expected that the teacher will be creative to develop new lessons.

In the new teaching learning process the students are always active. Their abilities and strengths could be observed at the teaching learning process. The teacher should appreciate them, and encourage them. Sometimes, the teacher may observe difficulties that pupils face. At such occasions the teacher should help those pupils to overcome them. Encourage peers to help. The process of assessment done at the teaching - learning process will help effective learning.

Further, pay your attention on the assignments and exercises suggested as instruments for extended learning which will be helpful to strengthen what students have learned. Consider it as a good situation to evaluate pupils’ learning. Pay attention on involving pupils in many other exercises on extended learning.

Detailed Syllabus
1.0 Introduction

The subject titled “Life Competencies and Civic Education is expected to be introduced to Grade 7 in year 2008. Its syllabus consists of two main parts. Part I is Life Competencies. It consists of five themes as follows: Working with self realization, Making use of leisure for personality development, Leading an exemplary life respecting morals, Using data and information in life situations and for effective learning, and Maintaining good interpersonal relationships.

Part II of the syllabus is on Civic Education. Themes included in this component are practising to live in the family understanding one’s rights, duties and responsibilities for the wellbeing of family members, understanding interrelationship in the society, performing duties and responsibilities of citizens, enjoying rights without harming others, valuing cultural heritage, respecting other cultures, protecting cultural heritage with dignity, and building up national place while protecting the identity of one’s culture. It is hoped to develop a generation of students with good human qualities and competencies who will work for the wellbeing of the society.

Activities in this Instructional Manual have been composed to achieve those needs. They are only exemplary activities and taking them as examples you can develop more activities.

Those activities that you develop should contain situations how they can be connected to the lesson, situations for exploration, presentation, extension and evaluation.

There are few Instruments for Extended Learning at the end of the book. Make use of them during the three terms. Each Instrument covers few competencies. Pupils can be evaluated using the given criteria for evaluation.

Your suggestions for the development of the activities given in this Manual will be highly appreciated.
2.0 Subject Objectives (Part I)

- Building up future life targets by indentifying one's abilities, skills and potentials.

4.0 School Policies and School Programmes (Life competencies)

In implementing the subject ‘Life Competencies and Civic Education’ in the school it is important to direct students to work outside the classroom at all necessary occasions without getting strict to the classroom. Directing the students to co-curricular and extra-curricular activities helps to develop competencies in them. Special attention should be paid on students to participate in taking decisions, leadership, participation, organization, planning, etc. specially in implementing the hidden curriculum in the school, it is important that the principal and all other leaders of school administration pay attention on implementing programmes suitable for the development of life competencies among pupils.

In addition it is necessary to modernize school policies and programmes so that pupils could get involved in various social and welfare activities. The school policies should include activities to get pupils’ participation and directions specially in teacher, parent and community programmes. Further, each pupil can be guided to maintain a diary in the school titling “My good work book”. It is important to provide reinforcement to pupils by checking it from time to time.

School policies should be adjusted specially to have the concept of life competencies and civic education developed among students not only through the efforts of the teacher who teaches this subject but by all other teachers who teach different subjects. The assistance of those teachers is important in this context. Further, it is important to get the maximum contribution of institutions and personnel who provide support in relation to this subject. It is hoped that life competencies are exhibited through the behaviour of pupils in the classroom and also in various situations outside the classroom such as in the play ground, library, canteen, hostel, morning assembly, etc. As learning outcomes of this subject, it is hoped to reduce disciplinary problems in the school and convert the school to be a place of joyful learning and create a joyful environment in the school.

School Policies and School Programmes (Civic Education)

The school exists to serve the human beings equally. it is in the school that the children are taught to develop and understanding about the people in the world and to honour human life and human beings. it is also the responsibility of the school to develop good attitudes and good behaviour among people. Human beings can develop only through co-operative and collective effort and the foundation for such co-operative and collective endeavour is laid at the school. Hence, Civic Education has to be taught as a compulsory subject in the school.
It is the responsibility of the school authorities to compose annual school programmes suitable for the respective region where each student can participate so that the content of the syllabus could be converted into more successful learning experiences. It is advisable to compose at the beginning of the year, a programme that can be practically implemented. Few co-curricular activities that can be included in such a programme are given below:

- Organization of field programmes and educational tours
- Initiate small scale research projects
- Do you know contests, debates and exhibitions
- Wall newspapers and journals
- Work in association with other organizations established in the area
- Work in collaboration with national and international organizations
- Conduct workshops with the support of resource persons.
Part II

Teaching-Learning Methodology
Introduction

In deciding the teaching learning methodology for this course, attention was paid on planning teaching-learning activities to develop student competencies based on exploration. In preparing for education based on competencies, a clear change in the role of the teacher too is expected.

Traditional Transmission Role of the teacher which was practised from very early days and the Transaction Role practised later on can be observed practising in the classroom even today. When we consider the decline of thinking skills, personal skills and social skills of those pupils who leave school, it is not difficult to understand the necessity of changes that have to be taken place in the teaching-learning methodology and how it is to be changed.

According to the Transmission Role of the teacher, the teacher is accepted as a person who knows everything that the students should learn, and considering students as those who do not know anything, transmission of knowledge to them has become the role of the teacher. This teaching learning process which is of lecture method in outlook, is limited to transmission of knowledge from teacher to student, and does not contribute sufficiently to arouse thinking skills of students or to develop their personal and social skills.

The dialogue that takes place between the teacher and the class is the elementary stage of the Transaction Role. In addition to the flow of ideas from teacher to the class and from class to the teacher, as a result of the emergence of pupil-pupil interactions later, this dialogue transforms gradually into a discussion. The teacher will continue questioning to take pupils from known to unknown, from simple to complex and from concrete thinking to abstract thinking.

In the competency based education, pupil activities will get the prominence, and the teacher will turn over to be a Resource Person who will act as a mediator in taking each child in the classroom at least to the nearest expertise level in respect of different competencies. Designing a learning environment with materials needed for learning and other facilities, observation of pupils’ learning, identification of pupils’ strengths and weakness, supplying reinforcement and feedback for the enhancement of pupils’ learning and developing evaluation instruments to extend teaching and learning to the outside of the classroom will be the fundamental tasks of the teacher in this context. The role of the teacher associated with that type of tasks is called the Transformation Role.

The series of activities to implement the detailed curriculum introduced by the first part of this course has been included in its second part. Each of those activities has been developed to include at least three steps. Through the first step of an activity an attempt is made to get pupils engaged in learning. Hence this step is named ‘Engagement Step’. As a start of this step, the teacher initiates a dialogue exhibiting the characteristics of the ‘Transaction Role’. Later, this dialogue gradually turns to be a discussion and thereby pupils will get engaged in exploration of the prerequisite knowledge for the basic competency that has to be developed and to acquire the gestures of the following steps of the activity. There are many techniques that the teacher can adopt in the transaction of ideas at the beginning. Questioning, display of stimuli such as pictures, newspaper advertisements or flash cards presentation of problems or crosswords, dialogues, role play, poems, songs, demonstrations, and the use of audio tapes or video tapes are some of those techniques. The first step of an activity takes place to achieve the following three objectives:

- To draw the attention of the class.
- To provide opportunity for pupils to recall prior knowledge.
- To introduce the basic elements of the exploration that the pupils would get involved in at the second step of the activity.

The second step of the activity is designed to provide opportunity for pupils to get involved in exploration. So, this step could be named ‘Exploration Step’. Pupils will get engaged in the exploration based on the instructions given in a leaflet prepared by the teacher specifically for this purpose. The teacher should design this activity so that pupils could get engaged in cooperative learning exploring different profiles of the problem in small groups. Important characteristics of this step will be that the pupils would make use of the available resources, take part in group discussions and get engaged in exploration. As a result of being engaged in such group activities for a considerable period of time in the school, pupils will be able to develop a series of important skills necessary for the day to day life, such as self discipline, listening to others, working with others co-operatively, helping others, time management, production of high quality goods, honesty, etc.

In directing pupils towards exploration, the teacher should not take decisions in selecting leaders of pupil groups. The teacher should only prepare the background for the emergence of leaders from among pupil groups. Pupils will thus get the chance of taking leadership at different situations based on their hidden abilities.

At the third step of an activity each group will get the chance of presenting the results of the exploration to the others. What the teacher should do here is to promote pupils to do group presentations. It is helpful to direct pupils to plan presentations so that each participant would get responsibilities. An important feature of this step concerned with ‘explanation’ of pupils’ findings is the emergence of chances for pupils talk instead of teacher talk which was prevalent in our traditional classroom.

At the third step of an activity when the findings have been explained, pupils should be directed towards further development, which may be called ‘elaboration’ stage. When the groups have completed their group presentations a review of the presented findings has to be done. Pupils who worked in different groups may be given a chance to do this review. Group or Groups who made suggestions for development could be given the first chance to make such reviews. Pupils in other groups can be allowed to do it later. However the final review could be done by the teacher. Here, the teacher should make an overall explanation to cover all the important facts explored in the activity.
It is a responsibility of the teacher with relevance to this methodology of teaching and learning to find-out whether the teaching learning process has achieved success or in other words whether it has achieved its targets. Assessment and evaluation is a primary need in this context. The teacher should include provision for assessment and evaluation in the process of teaching and learning at the planning stage. The teacher can do the assessment in the process of doing the activity, when the pupils get engaged in exploration. At the third step of the activity where pupils do explanations on their findings, the teacher can do the evaluation. A detailed inquiry on assessment and evaluation is done later in this book.

Teaching learning methodology explained so far guides the teacher to implement the "Transformation Role", Group exploration assumes the important aspect here, and there is provision for transaction, discussion and explanation as well. At the first step on introduction there is provision for transaction and discussion and at the final step when the final review is done the teacher will get a chance for a 'short lecture'. Along with the curriculum reforms undertaken under the first educational reforms of the new century, in developing teaching learning methodology priority has been given to the emergence of the 'Transformation role' of the teacher, while the good features of the 'Transmission Role' and the 'Transaction role' too have been taken into consideration.

Teaching Learning Methodology (Life Competencies)

In the teaching learning procedure relevant to the subject ‘Life Competencies and Civic Education’, it is important to create a learning situation for students by the teacher rather than adopting the system of direct teaching. Since it is expected to develop competencies in children for their personal development and thereby make them contribute for the social development, it is important to create a teaching learning environment.

More flexible teaching learning techniques should be adopted in the new subject field, and it is important to provide life experiences suitable for the practical society rather than carrying out lectures and discussions.

It is anticipated to develop social skills among pupils by providing learning experiences gained in cooperative groups. In the teaching-learning process, the classroom, the school society, the school environment, the nearby environment and the nearby social institutions could be appropriately made use of to gain firsthand life experiences.

In such a teaching learning environment, the teacher can appropriately adopt teaching-learning methods such as observation, case studies, games, role play, interviews, surveys, explorations, self studies, to provide life experiences suitable for the practical society rather than carrying out lectures and discussions.
It is anticipated to develop social skills among pupils by providing learning experiences gained in co-operative groups. In such a teaching learning environment, the teacher can appropriately adopt teaching-learning methods such as observation, case studies, games, role play, interviews, surveys, exploration, self-studies, experiments, brainstorming sessions, exhibitions, projects, field studies, etc.

Such teaching learning methods can be easily adopted in the ‘Transformation Role’ of the teacher, all such teaching-learning methods can appropriately be adopted to include the steps explained above, namely, engagement, exploration, explanation of findings, elaboration and evaluation, and thereby the teaching learning process can be made meaningful.

Teaching-learning Methodology (Civic Education)

Lecture method which was commonly adopted in the classroom teaching-learning process in the past, is not emphasised to be continued further as an important teaching-learning technique. Instead of directing pupils towards a competitive educational environment, our attention should be paid towards teaching methods which should help to promote pupil competencies relevant to cooperation and the world of work, create a delightful learning environment and lead to self-studies.

The ultimate aim of the subject ‘Civic Education’ is to create a future generation with human virtues leading to peaceful coexistence. To achieve this aim the pupil should be given opportunities to apply what is learnt in the classroom into life experiences, and for that, practical activities in the school are very much needed. Hence, the classroom process of teaching, learning and evaluation has to be organized in view of practical experiences. Social skills of pupils could be enhanced by developing relationships with institutions and personnel outside school. Teachers should have a good plan to get pupils participated in activities outside the classroom and for the organization of those activities to suit the age levels of pupils, and for the development of experiences through learning events leading to development of behavioural patterns related to democratic values.

Practical activities are important to get pupils involved in self studies rather than listening to teachers teaching facts, observation, collecting information and analysing them, participate in group activities and to inculcate characteristics leading to personality development such as respecting leadership, bearing leadership, tolerance of others’ ideas and disciplinary behaviour. Teachers’ directions in the classroom and outside the classroom are important in this context. Following learning techniques are suggested in teaching the subject - Civic Education.’

- Observation
- Survey
- Collecting information through interviews
• Analysis of information
• Field work
• Children’s parliament, welfare societies, Sramadana (rendering free labour), labour dignity camps, Cadetting and Scouting camps.
• Attending to the sick and disaster management
• Various societies, social welfare, environment protection, protection of antique resources
• Projects
• Problem solving
• Inquiring
• Questions and answers
• Wall newspapers
• Exhibitions

Teachers have the freedom to apply the above techniques in the teaching-learning process appropriately.
Life Competencies and Civic Education

Part I

1.0 Acts with Self realization

Introduction

It is expected through this unit to explain that each person has his own identity and should maintain the honour and the dignity of himself. It is emphasised here that one should identify the evil forces in the society that bring unbeneficial effects and to be away from them and to accumulate forces that bring beneficial effects. It is also emphasized that they should select beneficial and suitable things out of various attractive phenomena and should spend the life with a correct aim.

1.1 Confirms one’s own identity and develops self dignity.

Subject Content

- Realizing that each person has his own identity. (a person is not totally equal to any other person in the world)
- Each person is a spiritual being (It is only the human bring that has self realization)
- Identifying the features of oneself that bring self dignity. (The importance of identifying one’s own good qualities)

Singer: Sunil Edirisinghe

English translation

Brother do not accept bad friends.
Sister do not be corrupt.
Do not come to the Bogambara.
Do not get this sorrowful situation even to an enemy.

The sound of the drum in the Temple tooth is chiming.
My eyes get wet when sins that I have done are reminded.
I die hundreds of times and am reborn.
I drink tears to satisfy the thirst.

I got advices from bad friends.
I fell into this sorrowful situation because of those wicked people.
I went in a wrong way.
That road ended in prison.
Two men stated below were clever students at their young age who were in the same class in the same school. Information on their present life are given below.

English Translation

Son, if you had been born in a royal family, you could have been a king. Drips of water fall on your bed through the thatched roof. Make me cry in this night without smiling in dream.

By the side of the roads there are shops with numerous things and sweets which make small children cry.
There are numerous toys that run and fly.
I can’t bear when you look aside by seeing them.
Make me cry in this night without smiling in dream.

Hearth which is lighted occasionally too knows the taste of the gruel cooked with broken rice.
You taste it as a divine food and run off to school.
Wearing rags, which I can not tolerate.
Make me cry in this night without smiling in dream.

An entertainment full of joy.
Gentlemen, take a drop of it.

Singer: Harshhana Dissanayake
Do not have tears in eyes which would disturb sweet scenes.
Do not have sighs in heart would decay lovely feelings.
Gentlemen, let us dance and sing with smiles.
This is a sweet world.

Divine pleasure of the wind that has come from heaven.
Blows always.
We have born in a world like this as a result of our past merits.
Gentlemen, let us dance and sing with smiles.
This is a sweet world.

The song

Singer - W.D. Amaradewa
English Translation
Bats throughout the night
Flock around Mee trees
Under those Mee trees seeds are spread.
I can not go out to collect them early in the morning.

As I did in the young age
I feel lonely now

When we went to the cinnamon forest
To collect firewood
You lost the way
And cried till I came to you
The loneliness and the sorrow that you got then
Is felt by me too in your absence deer brother.
Bats throughout the night . . . . .

When we were embracing each other
In the twilight
And while talking about ghosts
Dear brother you were listening to me while embracing me
Now I feel lovelnely in your absence.

The song

Extract: “Supahan Henguman”
Sumana Chandralatha Jayasundara

English Translation

It’s the school interval
Small kids got together
Plates of food got empty
There were smiles in all the faces.

Paslina in class “B”.
Was in hunger
Two eyes that understand
Other’s sorrow got wet.

The story about how seven people
Ate a berry came to the memory
The slice of bread that she brought
Was broken to two pieces.

Follow up work

Advanced Level results have been released. Piyal has got one mark less to apply to enter the university. He has got ‘B’ passes to all the three subjects. He has done Arts subjects - Political Science, Economics and Sinhala. His ambition was to enter the university. This was the first time that he sat the examination. Piyal’s father is a farmer. Mother is a Family Health Officer.

Piyal has a sister and a brother elder to him and a brother younger to him. Eldest in the family is his sister who has got married five ears back. Piyal’s brother who is the second in the family is getting a technical training in a factory in the city. He has left school after O Level. Piyal’s younger brother is in grade 10 in the school. Two friends of Piyal have got required marks to apply for the university. All of them were studying together. Three other friends who too were studying with Piyal have got less marks than Piyal.

- Get pupils in the class to be in groups to have three pupils in a group and get them discuss this case in their groups.
- Get each group to write down the measure that Piyal would take, and three other alternative measures.

To be discussed in the class:

- There are differences in learning results of individuals.
- There are different ways of learning.
- One can adopt different measures for learning.
- Inability to enter the university will not harm the life expectations.
- One can get a university degree without entering the university if desired.
- Problems in life can be solved successfully by taking correct decisions.
- Our targets in life should be flexible and should have alternative targets as well.

Annexe 4.2.2.1

Get a pupil to present the following puzzle to the class.

A traveller came to cross a river carrying a tiger, a goat and a bundle of green leaves. There was a boat which could take only the traveller and one of the three - the tiger, the goat and the bundle of green leaves at a time across the river. If the tiger is kept alone with the goat, the tiger would kill the goat and eat its flesh. If the goat is kept alone with the bundle of green leaves the goat would eat the bundle of leaves. How did the traveller take the tiger, the goat and the bundle of green leaves across the river.

Nilantha and Kamal

Nilantha and Kamal are two pupils studying in grade 7 in a school. Observe the character traits of Nilantha and Kamal given below.

Nilantha

Nilatha is in grade 7 in the school. His father has passed away 2 years ago. Nilantha gets up early in the morning and helps his mother in preparing hoppers to be taken for sale. He helps his younger brother and younger sister in getting ready to go to school and goes to school with them. He has many friends in his class and also in his village. He is very pleasant to his friends and talks to them in friendly manner. He helps others who are in his class, in the school and also in the village. He helps all of them. He is also helped by others in return. Recently his house was painted and for that so many friends in the village and many of his classmates helped him. Nilantha is well recognized in his village as well as in his school because of his good conduct and helpfulness.
Kamal

Kamal too is a pupil studying in Nilantha’s class. Kamal's father is a rich person. Hence, Kamal has enough money to spend. He is proud because he has money. He does not talk much with his classmates. Therefore he does not have so much of friends. It is rarely that he smiles. He thinks that he can do all his work alone and neglects others. But he can not do any work systematically. He does not have friendly talk. There was an alms giving in his home and for that he invited some of his friends in the class and in the village. But most of them did not attend it. Kamal’s contribution for this alms giving too was very less. Kamal has less recognition in his class and also in his village because of his proudness and laziness.

Pose the following questions to the class and try to get their answers,

1. What can you say about Nilantha’s character?
2. What are the weaknesses that you observe in Kamal’s character?

Information Sheet

There was a flock of red ants in a tree. They lived happily. A baby ant was born to this family. It was different from others. All others paid attention on this baby ant. This small ant grew up to be a big ant. This ant was very proud. This particular ant gets the help of others but never helps others in return. He keeps his goods separately and never gives others. He tried to live alone. One day there was a terrible wind by which the nest of those red ants was broken to pieces. All of them felt sorry. But that particular ant had different thoughts. He thought that he can live alone in a nest of his own.

Suddenly the sky got dark in clouds. Red ants got together to build up a nest soon. They worked quickly and completed their nest. But the particular red ant did not cooperate with them. He tried to build up a nest alone for himself. Ants who completed their nest were now ready to have their meals. But that particular ant was still trying to make his nest. He could not complete it. He was very tired now. Suddenly a rain started with a wind.

The particular red ant fell onto the ground along with the leaf where he was hanging on. Now the rain has stopped. The flock of ants were highly worried because they could not see the particular red ant on the tree. They saw that the ant had fallen to ground and was sunk in the water. Young ants ran down and brought the red ant to the tree. He was unconscious. Ants gave first aid to remove water from his stomach. A lady ant boiled water. A sister ant brought a towel to wipe his body. The red ant opened his eyes. Others were very happy. After some time they gave a cup of hot coffee to this red ant. Now he is O.K. The red ant felt very sorry. He apologised from others for his mistake and promised that he would not make a separate nest alone thereafter and that he would live cooperatively with others.

Exemplary Activities
7.1 Our Family

Introduction

The basic social unit is the family. The society is composed of few family units. The strength of the Society depends on the strength of the family unit. Family is the Social unit where a person gets membership first. It is the social unit where a person bears the membership for a long period. It is the social unit that influences a person primarily for the personal development. Family as a social unit contributes in building up a good social environment by producing good social members. The family unit has faced challenges in the world which has subjected to changes as a result of various economic and social factors. Limitation of relationship among members, decrease of rest, decrease of parental protection are examples of such challenges. It is expected through this lesson unit to make pupils knowledgeable about the importance of the family as a social unit, social customs and traditions that are experienced through the family life, duties and responsibilities that have to be performed as family members and the importance of maintaining good relationships with neighbour family units. Further, it is expected to develop skills in maintaining good family relationships and inter family relationships. It is expected that pupils would develop competencies in contributing for social wellbeing by facilitating the study of this unit through composing active learning situations.

Activity 71.1: “Let us build up a united family”.

Time: 40 minutes

Quality Inputs:
- A4 papers
- Marker pens
- Annexe 7.1.1.1 - Activity Sheet

Teaching-learning Process:

Step 7.1.1.1:
- Distribute A4 papers among pupils so that each pupil gets one.
- Give instructions to pupils to draw his/her family members.
- Display those pictures in the class.
- Conduct a discussion highlighting the following:
  - There are many members in the family
  - They live very close to you
  - When all the members living in your home are taken together that will be your family
  - Mother and father are the leaders of your family
  - Your brothers and sisters are the other members
  - Such a family consisting of parents and children is called a ‘nucleus family’
  - Sometimes some of your close relations such as your grandmother, grandfather, aunt or uncle may be living with you in your home.
  - Such a family is called an ‘extensive family’
  - The smallest social unit in the society is the family
  - Unity among family members brings strength to the family

(10 minutes)

Step 7.1.1.2:
- Distribute the copies of the Activity Sheet given in Anexe 7.1.1.1 among pupils.
- Give necessary instructions to do the activity.

(15 minutes)

Step 7.1.1.3:
- When the pupils have completed the Activity get them into two groups as ‘nucleus families’ and ‘extensive families’.
- Get them discuss the activity in the groups.
- Get them present what they have learnt.
- Get others to express their views regarding the presentations.
- Make a review highlighting the following:
- Family is the smallest social unit in the society
- Man is a social being
- Each pupil in the class is a member of a family
- Family consists of various members
- Families fall into different types according to the members of members in those families
- When a family consists of only parents and children it is called a ‘nucleus family’
- When parents, children and some other close relations live in one residence it is called an ‘extensive family’
- Unity and cooperation among family members make the family stable

(15 minutes)

Assessment and Evaluation:
- States that when all the members living in one residence are taken together it is called a family.
- Accepts the importance of unity and affection maintained in the family.
- Differentiates nucleus family and extended family.
- Presents the characteristics of a good family member.
- Works with a group feeling

7.2 Our Society

Introduction

The society is composed of many family units and in the society there are differences. Various social organisations have been built up based on various human needs.

It is necessary to perform duties and responsibilities by everyone for the well being of the society. Various problems have been arisen in the present society as a result of demanding rights while neglecting duties and responsibilities by citizens. This is clearly seen in social units like family, school and society. Hence there is a need to have a positive change in the society.

It is expected from this lesson unit to make pupils knowledgeable about the society where we live in as social beings, and also inter relationships built up in the society, and customs, traditions and laws and regulations that help to maintain those inter relationships. It is expected through the study of this unit that pupils would get a knowledge how rights are to be enjoyed within a legal frame in a virtuous way by performing duties and responsibilities and would develop competencies needed to live as a good citizen with a balanced personality.

7.2 Our Society

Competency : Tends to perform one’s duties and responsibilities by identifying rights as a member of the society.

Competency levels:

- Examines inter relationships prevailing in the society.
- Practises to enjoy one’s rights within a legal frame as a member of the society.
- Performs duties and responsibilities connected with rights.

Subject Content

7.2 Our Society

7.2.1 Introduction to Society

Various social organisations are built up based on different human needs. The association of those organisations can be called a society.

Various definitions have been done about society in relation to Social Science Subjects.

eg. “It is an association of a number of people developed as a result of building up inter relationships among them.”
• “It is the total association of institutions, groups and organisations built up by human beings living in a demarcated land area to get their devises, needs and wants fulfilled.”
• “It is a unit of people who think it as a social unit with well defined limitations and organised by living together and working together”. (Linton Ralf, The Science of man is the world crisis, Colombia University Press, New York, 1965)
• “Society is like an active workshop of people experienced to freedom through power and support of each other. It is a network of human relations. It is an ever changing phenomenon”. (Perer L. Bergaar - Invitation to Sociology)
• Family is the basic and the smallest unit in a society.
• Society is born based on family units and their needs.
• Examples of some social organisations to be seen in such a society are given in Figure 2.1 given below.

• The society came into being as result of the effort taken to spend a civilized life.
7.2.2 Inter relationships in a Society

- Inter relationships are those relationships that exist between persons and persons, between institutions and institutions and between persons and institutions.

eg.
- Relationships between parents and children.
- Relationships between teachers and students.
- Relationships among family members.
- Relationships among neighbours.
- Relationships among institutions, associations and organisations in a society.
- International relationships.
- Inter relationships illustrated in the form of a figure

![Interrelationships diagram]

- Inter-relationships help to have wellbeing of the Society.
- Needs that can not get fulfilled alone by an individual could be fulfilled in co-operations with others through inter-relationships.

7.2.3 Our duties and responsibilities

- Activities assigned with a bond to citizens to be performed for the existence of the society are called duties.
- Duties can be classified as legal duties and virtuous duties.

7.3 Our Culture

Introduction

Sri Lankan Society is a multi cultural one. Various ethnic groups - Sinhala, Tamil, Muslim, Malay, Burgher and others live in Sri Lankan. They talk different languages. People belong to different religions as well. They have different cultures. Sinhalese are the majority group. Other ethnic groups too live in all the parts of the country. This multi culture had been there in Sri Lanka from ancient time.

Those ethnic groups contribute in the national economy, national politics and in state administration. So we should admire this multicultural system. The constitution of Sri Lanka allows its citizens to accept any religion, to talk any language, to have any belief, to live in any place of the country and to enjoy the culture either alone or with others.

It is a timely need of Sri Lanka to build up the national unity amidst cultural differences. It is expected from this lesson unit to develop attitudes of pupils so that they would value their own culture while respecting other cultures and thereby produce a young generation with a balanced personality in Sri Lanka.

Activity 7.3

Competency 7.3: Contributes in building up the national unity preserving the identity of one’s culture while respecting other cultures in a multi cultural society.

Competency levels:
- Respects other cultures while valuing ones’ own cultural heritage.
- Analyses special characteristics of each culture.
- Respects symbols representing national identity using them in the proper way.
- Values the morals of a good citizen.

7.3 Our Culture

7.3.1 A brief introduction about Culture.

- Introduction to Culture

“The term culture resembles all aspects, such as the language, clothes and ornaments, food, arts, literature, education, law, customs, values, beliefs and religion” etc.
• Definitions given to culture

“Culture or civilization is the complex totality of all aspects such as knowledge, beliefs, arts, laws, morals, customs and practices, habits and abilities that are acquired by man as a person living in the society”

(E.B. Tylor - Primitive Culture - John Murray - London)

“It is the collective name that can be given to all behaviour patterns socially acquired in the form of symbols and gained hereditarily.

(Charles A. Elwood, Social Science Dictionary, 1944)

“To all social activities, ie. in broad language, marriage, systems of possessing, greetings, industries, art etc. are said to be culture.”

(C. Wislor - “American Anthropologist 1920)

• Cultural features

![Cultural features diagram]

• Imparting culture

  • Society depends on the manner of imparting culture from generation to generation.

  • Institutions that act as agents of imparting culture.

    • Family

    • Education institutes

    • Religions institutions

  • Family as an agent of imparting culture.
• Institutions that act as agents of imparting culture.
  • Family
  • Education institutions
  • Religious institutions

• Family as an agent of imparting culture
  Practising its members to have day to day activities systematically
  eg. food habits: - To take food only at due time
       - To wash hands before taking meals
       - Not to smack while eating

• Education institutions as agent of imparting culture.
  eg. school - Attending the school and departing the school at the correct time.
       - Studies according to a time table
       - Cleaning the school environment

• Religious institutions as agent of imparting culture.
  - Explaining what is to be done and what is not to be done.
  - Explaining what is good and what is bad.
  - Explaining what is correct and what is incorrect.

• Importance of preserving the culture.
  - It decides the existence of the society.
  - It preserves the identity of the nation.
  - It helps to build up national unity.
  - It develops personality of people.
  - Controls behaviour of human beings.
  - Develops human attitudes and morals.

7.3.2 Special characteristics of various cultures

• Causes for cultural differences.
  - There are several ethnic groups in Sri Lanka - Sinhala, Tamil, Muslims, Burgher and other minor groups.

• Ethnic and religious differences bring about other cultural differences.
• Such differences are,
  - language and literature
  - art
  - food and beverages
  - clothes and ornaments
  - customs
• There are festivals relevant to different religious and ethnic groups.

- Wesak festival
- Poson festival
- Poya day
- Thipongal
- Maha Shiva Rathriya
- Deepavali
- Haj
- Ramasan
- Prophet Mohommeod’s birthday
- Christmas
- Good Friday
• Other occasions where cultural customs are performed.
  - Birth of a child.
  - Giving the first meal to a child.
  - Marriage
  - Funeral
7.3.3 Common features of different cultures

- There are common features in all different cultures
  - language
  - religion
  - beliefs and faiths
  - jobs
  - arts
  - clothes and ornaments
  - methods of salutation
  - marriage
  - industries
  - ways of thinking
  - pattern of life
  - customs/traditions
  - food and beverages

- Inter relations between different cultures are needed for the existence of the society.
  - festivals
    eg. all religious offerings
  - Common religious places
    eg. Sri pada
    Kataragama
  - Inter-marriages
    eg. Sinhala - Muslim
    Sinhala - Tamil
    Buddhist - Christian
  - Arts
    eg. Ancient arts
    belonging to Polonnaruwa and Anuradhapura
    periods have features’
    of different cultures
  - Clothes and ornaments
    Clothes and ornaments belonging to different cultures are being used by all others.
    eg. Saree
    Gown
    Tousers
    Salvari dress
- Methods of salutations and greetings
  eg. Shake hand
      Ayubowan
- Religious
  eg. Using flowers for offerings, welcoming and in decorations
      Lighting oil lamps

- Communities belonging to different cultures contribute in economic activities, protection of law and peace and in Social welfare work.

- People belonging to different cultures are involved in economic fields
  eg. cultivation
      animal husbandry fisheries industries
      services

- Every culture pays attention on the need of developing human conduct and abilities relevant to the well being of the society.

- Changing on social needs is a common feature in all cultures.
  eg. - Women doing jobs
       - Getting medical treatments when get ill instead of following ancient offerings
       - Making use of new technology for various purposes.
7.3.4 National identity and national peace

- People who have got citizenship in a country either by birth or by registration are accepted as a nation.

- Definitions on nation.
  “Nation is constituted not because of talking a same language or belonging to a same ethnic group but on the desire to maintain the success commonly built up in the past”
  (Urnest Rainon 1882)
  “A nation needs a state. Hence one state for one nation is the attitude of nationalist politics. There the nation means the state.”

  Structure of the state can be explained as follows:
  - precise land
  - population
  - government
  - sovereignty

  It the nation indicates the state it should have above features.

- When all citizens living in a country act with the attitude that they belong to a same nation and value their culture nationality is built up.
  “‘Nationality’ can be defined as a noticeable quality of a community having a common origin and traditions”
  “It is a community organised with the desire to be a nation”
  (Fredvick Hurts)

- Examples to nationality
  - Sri Lankan
  - Indian
  - American
  - Japanese

- So many ethnic groups may live in one nations.
  eg. Sinhala
  Tamil          Sri Lankan
  Muslims
  Burghers

- If we act as one nation as Sri Lankans not as different ethnic groups the nation will achieve development.

  It is difficult for us to develop as a nation if we get divided into ethnic groups.
When there is no unity among ethnic groups, there will be reluctance, suspicion and enmity among those groups.

It will be a barrier in contributing in economic and development activities.

When we work unitedly as one nation without getting divided into ethnic groups we can achieve our economic development easily.

Peace and cooperation among all citizens and the attitude as one nation would accelerate the development of the nation.

• People belonging to different ethnic groups in our country worked united to win independance.

When we think of our leaders who dedicated to win independence, we can understand that they had worked with an attitude that all of them were belonging to one nation.

Some such leaders are -
• Hon. D.S. Senanayake
• Hon. F.R. Senanayake
• Ven. Hikkaduwe Sri Sumangala
• Ven. Wariyapola Sri Sumangala
• Hon. T.B. Jaya
• Hon. Ponnambalam Arunachalam
• Sir Ponnambalam Ramanadan
• Hon. Sri Arumuga Nawalar

7.3.4 National flag, National anthem and National emblem

Subject Content
• Every nation has a national flag, national anthem and a state emblem.
• Sri Lanka too has a national flag, national anthem and a state emblem.

National flag
• Sri Lanka gaining independence on 04th of February 1948.
• Appointing a Committee to compose a national flag by Hon. Mr. D.S. Senanayake, the first Prime Minister of Sri Lanka on 16th March 1948.

Members of the Committee were as follows:
Chairman - Hon. Mr. S.W.R.D. Bandaranayake
Secretary - Professor Senarath Paranavitana
Hon. Mr. T.B. Jaya
Hon. Mr. G.G. Ponnambalam
Hon. Nr. T.R. Jaya
Sir Lalith Rajapakse
Sir John Kotalawala
• Colours and symbols included in the national flag:
  - A lion bearing a sword in the hand in yellow colour in the red background.
  - Four leaves of Bo tree in yellow colour.
  - A strip in pink colour
  - A strip in green colour
  - Yellow colour

• Occasions at which the national flag is hoisted.
  - Independence day
  - State festivals
  - National festivals
  - Special festivals in schools and other institutions

• Procedures that have to be followed in using the national flag.
  - The flag should be folded and fixed at the top of post before hoisting.
  - The national flag should not be kept on the ground at any time.
  - It should be honoured in exhibiting.
  - At the arrival of a foreign state leader to the country and when the national flag of that country is hoisted the national flag of Sri Lanka too has to be hoisted.
  - When the national flag is hoisted along with religious flags, they should be hoisted at a parallel height.
  - At international conferences it should be hoisted at a parallel height with the national flags of other countries.
  - When the national flag is hoisted along with the flag of the U.N.O., the national flag should be hoisted at the left hand side or at the right hand side of the U.N.O. flag. Normally the national flag is hoisted at the right side of the U.N.O. flag.
  - When the national flag is hoisted along with regional flags or school flags, etc the national flag should be hoisted at the middle of those flags and at a higher level than other flags.
- When the national flag hoisted along with other flags, the national flag should be hoisted first and when those flags are unhoisted, the national flag should be unhoisted first.
- In hoisting the national flag its two vertical strips should be at the side of the post.
- It should be hoisted in an open place to be seen clearly.
- When the national flag is hoisted across a street it should be hoisted horizontally so that the figure of the lion could be seen standing straight.

Procedures that should be followed in hoisting the national flag.
- It should be hoisted and dehoisted slowly and with respect.
- Soon after hoisting the national flag, national anthem should be recited.
- All those who participate at festival should stand up and be at the attention posture at the moment of hoisting the flag and should pay respect.
- All of them should stand facing the flag at that moment.
- Those who are in the forces and if they are in their uniforms, they should salute the flag at the moment of hoisting.
- Ordinary people should remove their headwear at that moment.
- If the national flag is kept hoisted at night, the place should be lighted.

Using the national flag in processions.
- The post carrying the flag should be raised straight.
- If the national flag is taken along with other flags, the national flag should be taken at the middle of them and in front.
- In saluting a guest the national flag should not be turned down.
- When the national flag is taken along with other flags, the national flag should be taken at the right side of the procession.

Hoisting the national flag on a stage
- When the speaker makes his speech facing the crowd the national flag should be hoisted at his right side.
- Or else it should be hoisted at the back side of him on the wall and above him.

Half masting
- At a day of national mourning the national flag is half masted. The government decides when it is to be half masted.
- First the national flag is hoisted at the top of the post. Then it is brought down (1/3 of the length of the post from the top)
The national flag should not be used bringing damage to its respect.

Assessment and Evaluation
Introduction

Assessment and evaluation is a programme with interpersonal relationships that could be easily implemented in the classroom itself in order to confirm the attainment of learning results by pupils expected through the teaching learning process and to recognize the competency levels that the pupils have achieved. If the Assessment is done appropriately, it is not difficult for the pupils to gain an expertise at least close to the relevant competency. On the other hand what is expected from evaluation is to recognize the competency levels that the pupils have achieved.

Teachers who are involved in the assessment can provide two types of guidance commonly known as ‘feed back’ and ‘feed forward’. It is the function of the teacher to provide feedback to pupils when their weaknesses and inabilities are discovered, and to provide feed forward to pupils when their abilities and strengths are discovered in order to promote those abilities and strengths.

For the success of the teaching-learning process it is necessary for pupils to recognize the competencies they have gained out of those competencies expected from the course. In an evaluation system it is the aim of the teachers to judge, the competency levels that the pupils have achieved in the lines of levels of pupils’ success. The teachers also should communicate the pupils’ progress to the pupils, parents and other relevant parties.

The curriculum presented to you constitutes a student centred, competency based and activity oriented exposition. Learning through action to make the life meaningful is the substance of the 'Transformation Role' of the teacher.

In the curriculum implemented through a series of pre developed activities, it is attempted to integrate teaching and learning with assessment and evaluation. It is possible for the teacher to assess pupils when they get involved in exploration in groups at the second step of each activity and to evaluate them at the third step when they present and elaborate their findings. It is expected from the teacher to move with pupils when get involved in exploration, observing their activities and facilitating and guiding them to solve their problems in the classroom.

Five common criteria have been suggested to make assessment and evaluation easy. Out of these criteria, the first three have been formulated based on knowledge, skills and attitudes accumulated to build up each competency.

The last two criteria will help pupils to expertise two abilities important for the life. The teacher should attempt to recognize the five behavioural changes of pupils related to these criteria when they get involved in activities in the classroom, and also to strengthen those behaviours at the assessment and to quantify them at the evaluation.
Teaching-learning process can be made more effective by improving the evaluation procedure. For that the teacher has the chance to generate few situations for evaluation in the lines of Activity Continuum. Evaluation procedure could be made meaningful by separating the Activity Continuum into few Activity Clusters, so that recognition of Evaluation Points would be made easy. At the beginning of each Activity Cluster, it is necessary to introduce Evaluation Instruments that are going to be applied for each activity. In selecting Evaluation Varieties, it is necessary to select awakening activities that would motivate children's learning. A list of activities relevant to this is given below.

- Concept Maps
- Wall News Papers
- Quizzes
- Question and Answer books
- Student Portfolios
- Exhibitions
- Debates
- Panel Discussions
- Seminars
- Impromitu Speeches
- Role Plays
- Presentation of Literature Reviews
- Field Books/ Nature Diaries
- Practical Tests

Part 3 of the course has been planned to introduce a suggested Evaluation Point and the Evaluation Instrument selected for that. When the evaluation is done in two ways within activities and in between activities, the teaching-learning process will get more strengthened and the pupils will get motivation to learn with pleasure and awakening.

Assessment and Evaluation

1. Self assessment could be planned based on competencies relevant to the lesson. A comparative assessment could be done considering the views and attitudes presented by pupils before starting the lesson and the views and attitudes presented by pupils at the end of the lesson or at the end of the term. It is expected that the pupils will understand their strengths and weaknesses through this self evaluation. Criteria for assessment and evaluation could be identified by the teacher taking into consideration the human and physical resources available in the school.

2. Peer Evaluation

After assigning an activity to a group and allowing pupils to work to achieve objectives, evaluation could be done based on criteria like contribution, organization, inter-personal relationships and planning. It is important to supply reinforcement at the end of the activities by different means such as evaluation, giving prizes, etc.
3. Maintaining Portfolios

- Giving instructions to pupils on maintaining portfolios at the beginning of a term.
- Checking and supplying reinforcement at the middle of the term.
- Criteria given below may be used in the final evaluation.
- following instructions
- organization
- creativity
- reflection of understanding the relevant concepts and competencies

4. Project Evaluation

- Implementing a small project at the end of a term, either individually or by a group.
- Criteria for evaluation may be decided by the teacher.

5. Formal Evaluation

Knowledge on basic concepts relevant to the subject ‘Life competencies and Civic Education’ should be tested through questioning. The questions should be set to test the knowledge, attitudes, skills and practices of the pupils. This can be done at the end of a lesson or at the end of a term.

Assessment and Evaluation
(Civic Education)

Assessment and Evaluation should be done as explained below.

The organization of the school Based Assessment should be done by subject teachers following The Scheme of School Based Assessment prepared by the National Institute of Education.

Mid year Tests and the Year End Tests are held at the school level, Divisional level and Provincial level.

About 50% of the periods allocated for each Unit may be used for practical activities concerned with school based assessment
